

North Eastern Utah

Margo Lake in the Uinta Mountains, MT. Agassiz in distance. Ashley National Forest. Scott T. Smith

Pack your bags for an adventure to North Eastern Utah. With mountains to climb, fish to catch, rivers to raft and historical sites to see, this unique region has a wide range of year-round recreation. Rich in western lore, North Eastern Utah was home to mountain men, pioneers, outlaws and Native Americans. Scenic byways and backways take visitors through towering mountain peaks and beautiful scenery. Stop in Vernal to find the largest Jurassic Dinosaur Quarry in the world along with many other dinosaur exhibits and activities. Experience the culture of the Old West, see elaborate costumes and taste authentic Native American food at the Ute Tribe Pow Wow in Roosevelt. Strap on your spurs and buckle your chaps for the PRCA Dinosaur Roundup Rodeo in Vernal. For more information on the region's activities, visit www.undiscoveredutah.com.

ASHLEY NATIONAL FOREST

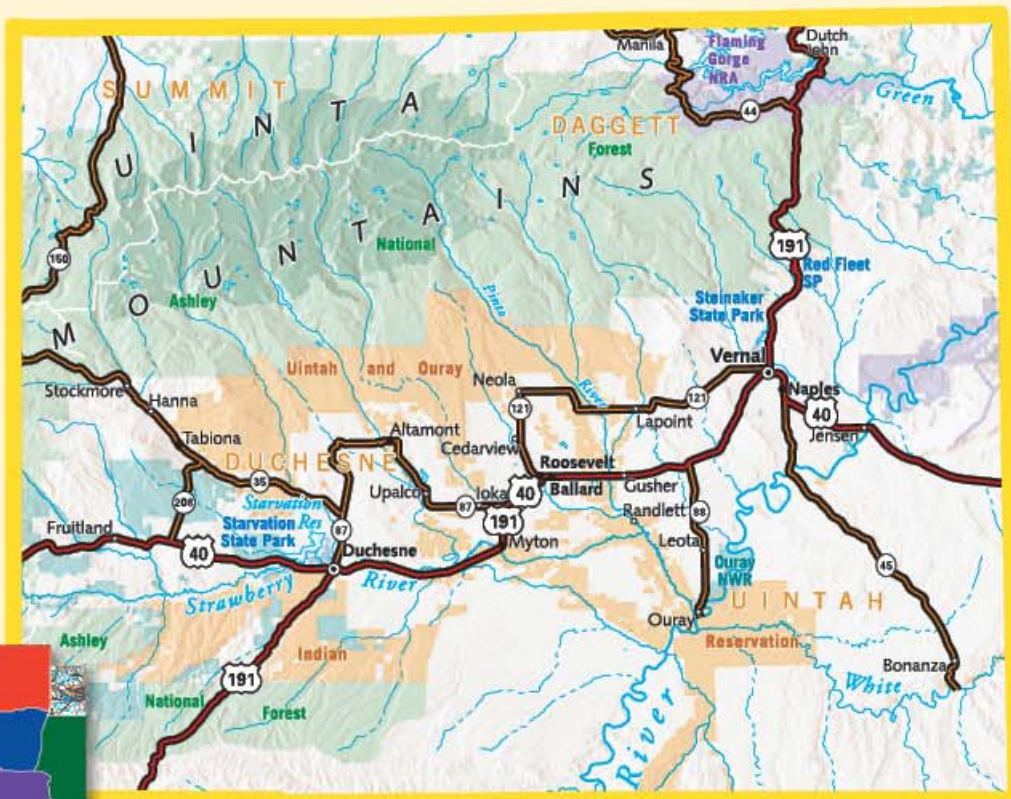

This area encompasses 1,384,132 National Forest acres, (1,287,909 in Utah and 96,223 in Wyoming). Abundant wildlife including bear, mountain lion, moose, elk, mule deer, antelope and Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep roam freely throughout this area. Elevations in the Ashley National Forest range from 6,000 ft to over 13,500 ft. Visit www.utah.com/nationalsites/ashley.htm for information or call (435) 789-1181.

DINOSAUR NATIONAL MONUMENT'S

The cultural history of Dinosaur National Monument dates back 10,000 years and its 210,000 acres are ready to be explored. View fossils and exhibits at the temporary Visitor Center near the Quarry Visitor Center or take the Fossil Discovery Hike (approx. 1.5 miles round trip) and see a variety of fossils still embedded in rock. Hundreds of dinosaurs lived and died here and their stories captured in the rock around you. Visit www.nps.gov/dino or call (435) 781 7700 for information.

DRY FORK PETROGLYPHS

These petroglyphs are located 10 miles north of Vernal, on the McConkie Ranch and are famous for their quality and accessibility. They are found all along the 200-foot-high cliffs of the Navajo Formation and this gallery of primitive art shows excellent examples of the Fremont culture. Located on private land, access is granted to those who treat the artwork with respect. Open to the public, admission is free and donations are accepted. Call (435) 789-6932 for more information.

FLAMING GORGE NATIONAL RECREATION AREA

Flaming Gorge was established in the early 1960's after the Bureau of Reclamation built Flaming Gorge Dam. Situated 20 miles north of Vernal this area offers many recreational opportunities including camping, hiking, biking, water sports and fishing. There are two visitor centers, the Red Canyon Visitor Center and the Flaming Gorge Dam Visitor Center. Historic sites open to the public include the Swett Ranch and Ute Mountain Lookout Tower. Visit www.utah.com/nationalsites/flaming_gorge.htm or call (435) 784-3445 for information.

UTAH FIELD HOUSE OF NATURAL HISTORY STATE PARK MUSEUM

The exhibits and displays cover the 22,000-square foot facility inside and out of this museum. Vivid murals and tile floors help visitors connect geological time to real places in Vernal. Full-size replicas of dinosaurs peer into the museum windows from the Dinosaur Garden outside. Curious visitors, both young and old, can do their own investigating with books, models, puzzles, bones and chisels available. Visit www.stateparks.utah.gov for information and activities or call (435) 789-3799. Located at 496 East Main Street in Vernal.
